The Odyssey

Taft Senior

"Sustain for me the song of various minded men. Make the tale live for us in all its many bearings, O Muse!"

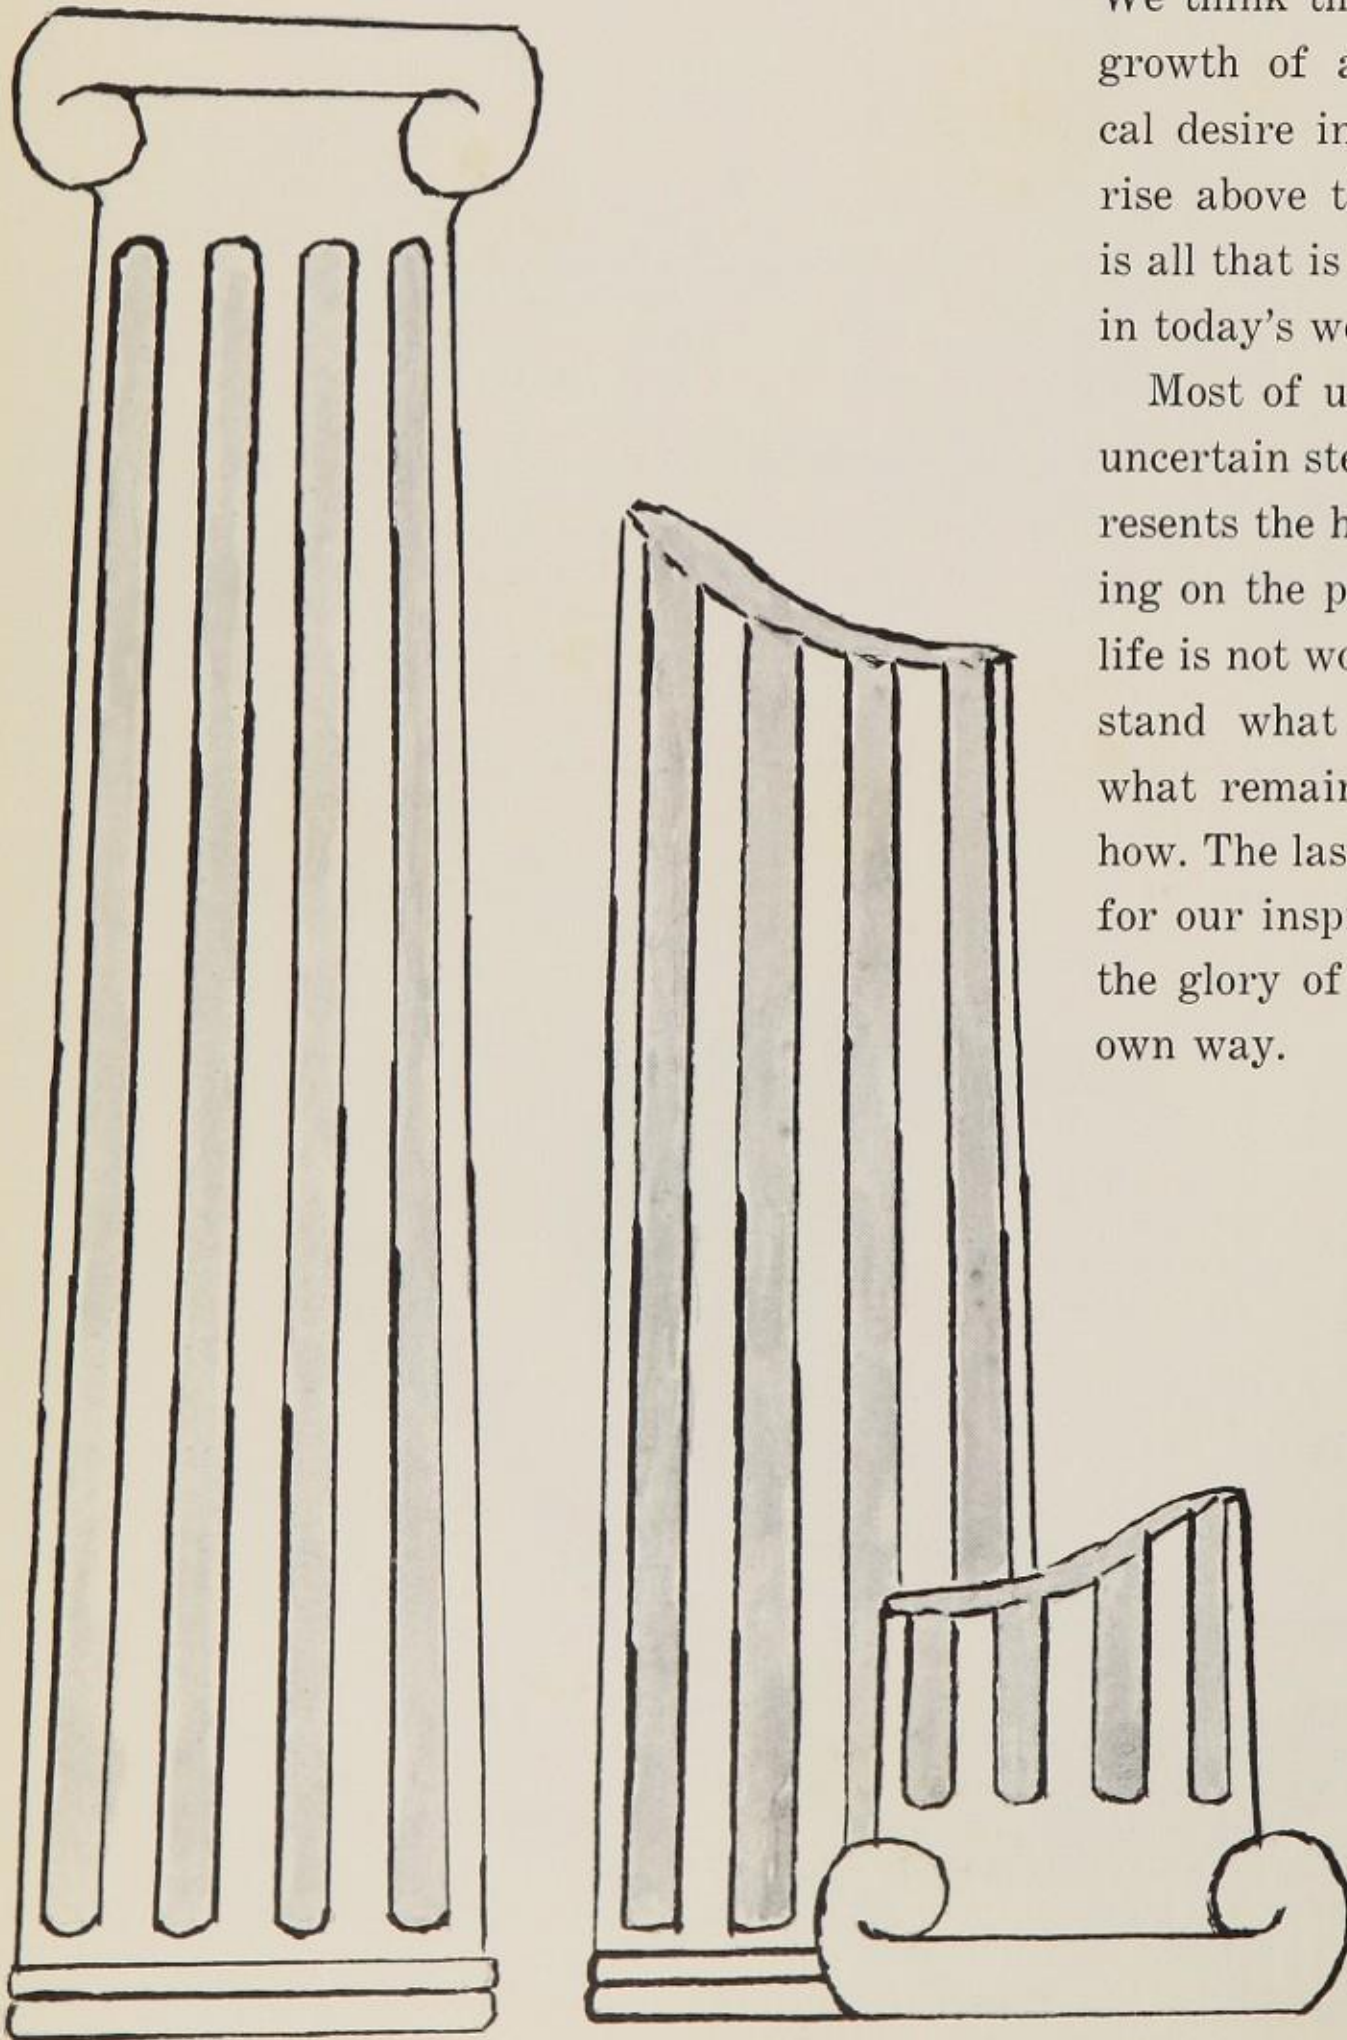

Odyssey: an epic poem, attributed to Homer, describing the wanderings of Ulysses (Odysseus) on his homeward voyage to Ithaca after the siege of Troy. — Funk and Wagnall's New Standard Dictionary of the English Language.

Before ploughing into the problem at hand, we of the Yearbook staff feel that the need exists to explain our preoccupation with life as an odyssey, a journey, a joy-ride, a funeral march, or what have you.

The Odyssey of Homer was certainly not only a voyage, but also a fight for survival. We think this Yearbook is a natural outgrowth of a passionate, almost hysterical desire in the hearts of some of us to rise above the sluggish mediocrity which is all that is required for apparent success in today's world.

Most of us have taken about seventeen uncertain steps toward the goal which represents the home port of our journey. Acting on the principle that "an unexamined life is not worth living," we seek to understand what we have accomplished, and what remains to be done, and why, and how. The last two questions led us to adopt for our inspiration, a book which stresses the glory of the individual who seeks his own way.

DEDICATION

"Not the immortal gods themselves can forever shield the man they love from the common need of death."

For ages a small group of men dreamed of a Utopia where men could live free of hate and ignorance; but these men have been trampled upon by others. For the first time one part of our vision is so black that we can see, by contrast, the light on the other side.

From our midst came one man who projected a steady, guiding light. He was trampled on. Staunch, tall, valiant, John Fitzgerald Kennedy was the fountainhead of youth and vigor. For this reason, perhaps, he was, and is, closer to us than any other president. He overcame the obstacles before him: recurring illness, his youth and his Roman Catholic religion to become President of the United States.

John Kennedy was a visionary, but he was also a pragmatic man who could bring dreams to reality.

This is the quality, in addition to his youth, which drew us to him for inspiration for our own lives. Youth is the time of idealistic dreaming. As we grow older, we are tempted to become "practical men" who honor expediency rather than idealism. It is good for us to remember a man, who in his short term of office, traveled farther than any other president in pursuit of the realization of his dreams. Everywhere he was respected, even by his enemies.

As a promoter of peace, he visited Berlin Wall, the "Wall of Shame." In speaking about the Wall and the crisis in Cuba he stated that Americans would pay the "cost of freedom" and never choose the path of surrender.

We believe, also, it was thrilling to know that the man with the most powerful job in the world was actively concerned with the education and welfare of young people. He discouraged high school dropouts and urged more federal aid to education. He had faith in us. Perhaps we left too great a burden on J. F. K. Now that he is not with us, can we continue? We should probe these lines of the undelivered speech he wrote on November 22, 1963 at Dallas:

"We in this country, in this generation, are by destiny rather than choice, the watchmen on the wall of world freedom. We ask therefore that we may be worthy of our power and responsibility, that we may exercise our strength with wisdom and restraint, and that we may achieve in our time and for all time the ancient vision of peace on earth and good will towards men."

It is this challenge which best expresses the spirit of our Dedication to the Aspirations of Our Generation which had been our theme before an idiotic act of violence shook us all out of our comfortable ruts. After the first shock, we realized that our theme was still appropriate because this shattering event made us ask some questions about ourselves and our society. Inevitably, we were more honest in talking about our aspirations. We admitted that anyone of us is capable of unreasonable hatred and violence, and we wondered how well equipped we were to learn the lesson Kennedy taught of the necessary supremacy of rational thought and action. The blasting of the gun did not destroy the ideas he worked for; rather it made us criticize ourselves, praising or blaming our ability or lack of ability to live by them. Do we respect his concepts of vigorous efforts, of intellectual honesty, of respect for all people, of dedication to world peace, enough to dedicate our lives to them in fact as well as in theory?

The most important tribute paid to President Kennedy is that the horror of his assassination has not crushed us, but has given us the incentive to close the gap between our aspirations and our daily lives.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

I am proud to have the opportunity to congratulate the class of 1964. It has been wonderful to be associated with you during the past year, and I have enjoyed sharing your pleasures and successes. I think we can look to your futures with confidence and anticipation. Youth has important contributions to make to the adult world: vigor, flexibility, enthusiasm and readiness to learn. Without the constant replenishment of our adult society by younger heads and hands, it would decline and decay. Do not grow old too fast. As men grow old, they come to believe that intense effort is somehow unsophisticated, that dedication is naive, and that ambition is a bit crude. There is the ever present danger that a rule-ridden society may bottle up your energy, or channel it into "all the tiny rivulets of conformity."

You have dedicated your yearbook to our late President, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Your close identification with his leadership is a mark of your best ideals and aspirations. Youth has been called hard-minded and cynical, but underneath, our ideals remain. So many of his qualities provide examples for your growth and development. He had high ambition; he dedicated himself to an enlightened concept of public well-being.

The Peace Corps, his devotion to civil rights and liberties, his reliance on expertism, his respect for all classes in America, his efforts to achieve peace through conciliation combined with enlightened defense measures, all won our admiration. He took admirable advantage of his opportunities to develop his own capacity. He worked hard, but made proper provision for recreation. He was interested not only in work but in art and literature. He found life exciting, and he kept on growing and gaining in the ability to use his powers. For him, as for us, the years ahead held promise of future deeds and future service. May his example help all of you to raise your sights, to develop your powers, and to fulfill your responsibilities to share in improving this nation's progress toward the goals he set for it.

When the editors of the Yearbook read the Principal's Message on the preceding page, they were so impressed by the personal tone of it, and by certain of the ideas contained in it, that they asked Mr. Linville for an interview, which took place soon after.

Deena Pers, Linda Avrin, and Michael Steinberg worked themselves up to the needed pitch of courage as they approached Room 133. Once seated, they were so comfortable in the protective presence of the principal that they forgot the formally worded questions they held clutched in moist palms, and just chatted with him.

Three ideas seemed to dominate the conversation: conformity, the battle of the generations, and the state of our nation. Mr. Linville admitted that school itself, with its required courses, books, and rituals, contributes to conformity, but he warned that we tend to carry this lack of individual thinking into every part of our lives. We allow the packaged product of television to shape our tastes in entertainment, thinking, and the products we buy. Furthermore, to avoid conflict or being called an odd ball, we accept group standards which are often false and cheap. He urged us to be sure to do what we have decided is right, not just what everyone else is doing. We should try to conform to what we think is the best in culture, not just the latest fad, because when we conform to the standards of a group we disapprove of, just to avoid the temporary misery of being "left out," we are selling the happiness of future for the right to belong to something beneath us.

Laughingly, everybody agreed that one standard the students definitely did not try to meet was that set by parents. According to our principal, this desire for independence from mother and father leads us to many kinds of silliness. We give up quiet, individual ambition to join all the other young people looking for things older people do not like, such as wearing sandals and beards. Resisting their parents' efforts to make the youngsters fulfill the ambitions and goals the parents failed in, the teenagers indulge in things like rock and roll because they bear the seal of adult disapproval.

Young people seem to be growing old very fast, Mr. Linville said, in terms of education, industry, causes, and world affairs. Unfortunately, they are growing up too fast in wrong ways, too. He sees a grim spectacle of teenagers trying to act like adults, and adults trying to act like teenagers.

As they sat, talking and listening, the editors were aware that the principal was enjoying the opportunity to exchange ideas with students. The gleam of the old social studies teacher was in his eye as he explained his theory of the trends of thought in the United States. From 1750 until about 1920, Americans were optimistic, believing that the nation was assuredly following a natural law of progress. The disillusionment after the War and the depression made us doubt ourselves. The definite and vigorous action of President Kennedy made us take sides and think positively once again. The handling of the Cuban crisis in October of 1962 was, Mr. Linville believes, an important turning point. Americans decisively took a course of action, and felt rewarded with success. Now, President Johnson is carrying forward the work of Mr. Kennedy, and Mr. Linville is especially pleased with the active programs for youth, and against poverty.

Perhaps the one development our principal would most welcome at this school would be the emergence of the Taft student from the comfortable "middle of the road" course most of us take. He would like to see us reach a little higher than we think we can.

We should like to say what we should like to see in this school: more opportunities for Mr. Linville and the students to talk with each other informally. We enjoyed the interview very much; we think he did, too.

FACULTY

ADMINISTRATION

"Beside the helm he sat, steering expert."

Mr. Shefter

Most prominent among the people who man the major offices on Taft's famous Office Row, running from East to West on the north side of the building, are the administrative assistants Mr. Shefter and Mr. Sokoloff, the Coordinator of Guidance, Mrs. Michelle Steinbock and Deans, Mr. Cobert and Mr. Schweitzer, Mrs. Nanna and Miss Wier.

Besides regulating the multitudinous details of a huge urban high school, such as teachers' assignments, programs, and report-card distributions, Mr. Shefter and Mr. Sokoloff act as our public relations experts. They answer innumerable telephoned requests for information about Taft, its people, and its regulations.

Mr. Sokoloff

They often establish contact between home and school. In addition, they act as trouble shooter around the school, disappearing without warning from their offices to settle a problem here or there. Finally, their offices are a place for students to sit and talk when the world is too confusing.

Mr. Cobert

Mrs. Steinbock makes every effort to insure that each student receives the benefit of the guidance services Taft can give him, as well as the attention of out-of-school agencies that can help him.

SENIOR TEACHERS

Senior official teachers seem to be complex combinations of oceans of patience, fireworks of bright remarks and wise sayings, and inexhaustible supplies of ready answers.

Their patience is amazing, considering the many trying circumstances of the senior year; their bright remarks and wise sayings are often unexpected, but still comforting and reassuring, and their inexhaustible answers are always omniscient.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

Literature has provided us with a storehouse of philosophies of life, and has dramatized human strengths and weaknesses common to us all. Some of us have been helped to formulate our philosophies and to understand better our own environment and our fellow man. We have learned also that every time we speak or write, we are allowing someone to see the workings of our minds. The English Department has painstakingly taught us to present our ideas in clear, forceful, correct language. For this, we thank them. The exercises in spelling, vocabulary, grammar, and composition at last make sense to us.

SOCIAL STUDIES DEPARTMENT

Social studies is helpful in that it provides a better understanding of government, people and events heard of, argued about, but never completely comprehended.

The very least social studies has done for us is to make us aware of how and why this nation is here today, and to give us clues as to the most favorable conditions for its continued development. The most it has done is to make us aware of how and why the peoples of this planet have survived until today, and to give us hopes for their further survival.

Good speech is a most important asset. To express oneself well is to be self-satisfied, for it is good to know that the point you are trying to make or the joke you are trying to tell has reached your audience. Also, students of speech courses tend to have an impressive self-assurance.

In the field of drama, it is the rare English class that does not eagerly accept the invitation of the classes in acting to attend one of the end-term programs that Mrs. Fields schedules in January and in June.

LIBRARY

The Taft library is a well kept, efficient, orderly place to study, to do research, or just to read for pleasure. Each day, 85 to 90 of its 18,300 books are taken out by students. Mrs. Greer, Mrs. Pearlman and Mrs. Zahn have made the large, sunny room even more attractive by their display of museum exhibits.

To arrive at a valid conclusion, the student must be disciplined by rules of logic and common sense. Believe it or not, logic is what is being taught along with the math course.

Mathematics plays a valuable role in our lives through applications in such fields as the sciences, industry and business.

The sciences perhaps contribute the most toward making our lives more comfortable and enjoyable.

With each new day, the mysteries surrounding us are revealed by the probing of the scientist. We are part of the age of applied science, or technology. We can see theory made reality. Some of us will accept the challenge of science by pursuing careers in that field. Even those of us who do not work in the Sciences must be aware that the topics we discuss in Biology, Chemistry, Earth Science, and Physics are no longer the monopoly of a few. The achievements of today's scientists are so closely related to our daily lives that any well informed citizen must be able to understand at least a little of the scientific reports published in newspapers and magazines. Otherwise, he is as ignorant as if he did not know the most rudimentary facts of history or his own language.

The late President Kennedy felt that "the state of the arts is related in a vital way to the state of the nation." It is the task of the Art Department, under the supervision of Mr. Manopoli, to instill an aesthetic value within each of us, so that we may distinguish between the attractive and the ugly.

Clean spoons, plates, floors and desks; warm, well-lighted classrooms; gleaming corridors are accredited to our tireless custodial staff. Under the supervision of Mr. Edward Burke, these good people let us in to locked classrooms and lockers, and restore light to our class discussions.

We are especially happy that Mr. Jack Beasley has returned to pilot us in our odysseys from one floor to another.

"Infallibly, he will find means of escape, though they fetter him in fetters of purest gold."

Do we presume when we decide to compare our lives to the Odyssey? Who are we that we dare say that our journey through life can in any way match the experiences of Odysseus as he made that perilous journey home? We believe that the Odyssey is the story of any human being who is aware of himself as a pilgrim making his way through difficulties, instead of letting them overcome him.

Let us not deny what we so often see. In our own lives there is evil, often more evil than good. Cruel and wanton forces act upon us. Over the forces that cause us harm we have often little control. For much of the evil in our lives we are not responsible.

This is the essential terribleness of life—so much of what happens to us we cannot control or determine. We rarely do what we want to do, but merely react to situations thrust upon us.

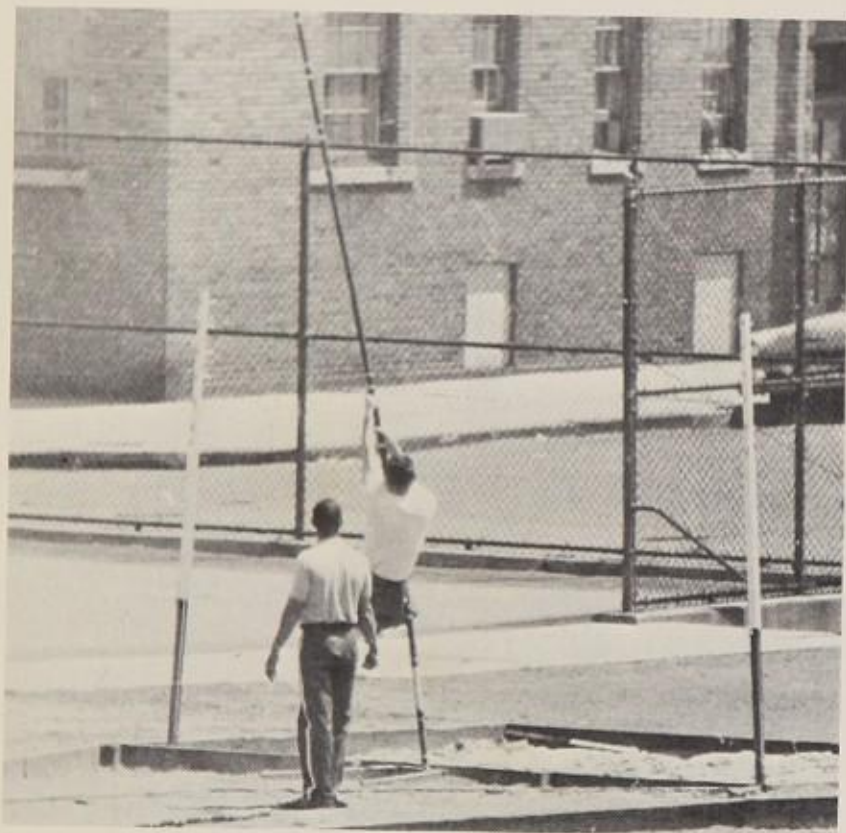

Outside forces greater than ourselves move upon us—disease, accident, the manifold injustices of society, perpetrated often in the name of goodness, and we find ourselves unable to stop them.

Perhaps the most horrible threats are those the psychologists tell us of: the self-destructive forces within us that we cannot control or even recognize.

Confined and assailed thus we still need not shrink from life. (All too many do—they go through the motions of life—but the hope, the spark, the fire of life is gone from them). We are men, however, who are born with the forces with which we can battle the evils that menace us. We have the power to raise ourselves from the quagmire we are in.

This is the essential good of our existence as men—our ability to resist the evils opposing us. It is not easy. But the true good was never achieved without pain. The pains of the conflict with life's evils are infinitely better than the dulling misery of submitting to those evils.

Religion tells us that we will rise from the dead and live a future life. It is a hope which inspires us. But there is a hope equally glorious; we can do something equally marvelous in this lifetime—we can rise from ourselves.

With each year that passes, the nations become fewer where the business of government is taken entirely out of the hands of the people. In our own country, long the most celebrated champion of democracy, we are learning that if we are to prevent that democracy from going stale, we must be prepared to accept the responsibility of active citizenship. By participation in our student government here at Taft, we have learned what cooperation is. You might ask in just what ways we have benefited by electing officials to represent us. These officials include the General Organization (G.O.)—Harold Krisbergh, President; Jeffrey Sweedler, Vice President; Marsha Lipetz, Secretary; Steve Jaffe, Treasurer.

Recently our student official—G. O. President Harold Krisbergh—expressed his views on the importance of student self-government. Harold said, "By having elected officials we have gained some valuable experience of adulthood. Participation trains us for good citizenship by giving us an opportunity to learn the techniques of a democratic society. It also provides training in leadership for those who are elected. If we couldn't attain these qualities, the teachers might as well run things."

Mr. Sullivan, the owner of the familiar voice on the Intercom every morning, is the dedicated faculty adviser of the G.O.

Taft is one of the few schools in the city that can boast a Future Teachers' Club, and boast we do, because it is a good one.

Sitting in a classroom, a student thinks only of his own progress, but when the Future Teacher takes the giant step to the other side of the big desk, her perspective changes, and she cares for the progress of the whole class. This is why, given a choice of schools to work in two hours each week, some of us chose what seemed to be the most difficult situations. We want to develop in these children love of country, respect for themselves, and desire for knowledge.

Mrs. Stein, the faculty adviser, is a good example of the tirelessly devoted teacher that some of these students will become. It is she who smooths over their difficulties, smiles at their self-conscious pleasure at being called "teacher", or going through routine chores such as signing a time book, or at being stared at by thirty pairs of eyes.

The word "Arista" is derived from the Greek term "aristo", which means, "the best." The best are those who have distinguished themselves for fine scholarship, extra service, and outstanding character. It is to them, that we pay homage. Mr. Traister, the Arista Advisor, has always thought of the Arista as an organization of the brightest and most cooperative students in the school, working in an atmosphere where they are constantly called upon to contribute their energies in the pursuit of excellence for all, and to share with others what is in their hearts and in their minds.

Mr. Traister is as concerned for the character of the students as he is for their scholarship. Members coach their fellow students, and give holiday parties for children's homes. To broaden their intellectual horizons, the organization invites faculty members to lecture on subjects related to, but beyond, their courses in school.

"Yes, but—" seemed to be the most characteristic words at Yearbook Staff meetings this year, as the students tried to make the book a synthesis of their personal aspirations and the will of the senior class. This very difficult task was made more pleasant by the sustained cooperation of the literary and art staffs, who sought to complement each other's ideas. Fortunately, there was always a peace maker to soothe ruffled nerves and egos.

In spite of everything, however, anxiety has been our constant companion. The production of the Yearbook has been one of the most tricky episodes in our personal Odysseys.

BAND

To start the day right, the Taft orchestra under Mrs. Rosen's energetic direction meets the first period in B21 to rehearse for their exciting concerts. The repertory consists of big musical hits such as "West Side Story," serious music like the theme from Tchaikovsky's "Fifth Symphony," and folk songs including "Boots and Saddle."

The motto of the group is: If the rehearsal is bad, the performance will be good.

Wandering in the basement at 3 o'clock you would probably hear what to you is "real" music emanating from Room B53. Suppose you walk in. There you meet Mr. Altsculer, a very talented man. As you watch him and listen to the results, you find that what you thought was "perfect" music is getting better and better. His students, average Taftites, not only seem to enjoy their work but are sometimes carried away by it.

One of the most interesting experiences is to hear the band play a waltz in marchtime. It is then that their originality and verve are most evident.

ORCHESTRA

CHORUS

All three chorus classes rehearse the same musical numbers in preparation for the annual school concert presented by some 170 voices. Here we developed poise, rhythm, and lungs, belonged to a productive group, and learned beautiful music. Some of the favorite selections of the chorus are the songs from Gilbert and Sullivan's H.M.S. Pinafore. Some of the closest friendships made in school are those that we develop as we harmonize our voices. Mr. McCormack and Mrs. Friedman are our choir leaders.

G. O. STORE

The G.O. Store has a remarkable collection of everything a student needs for school from books and bus passes to sweaters and stuffed animals. Efficiently run by Mr. Cusack and his aides, the G.O. Store serves every Taft student, constantly and conveniently. The newest fad is name plates.

To most students, the program committee seems a mysterious caucus that operates in the darkness of B39, deciding the fate of 3800 souls who depend on their grace for the easy teacher, the right lunch period, the convenient room. Actually, it is a hardworking group of students and Mr. Dichter and Mr. Schnieder, who aim to give each student the subjects he needs for graduation.

Taft is mindful of its many neighbors who are still not free from want.

The annual clothing drive, the Thanksgiving food drive, the Christmas stocking drive for homeless children, and service with the Junior Red Cross, all represent efforts to help right this wrong.

The students who give school service to this project coordinate our activities, by taking our donations to the Social Service Office, after they have reminded and nagged us to bring them. Not unwilling, just forgetful. Mrs. Halpern, Mrs. Wolfe, and Miss Miranda are the pleasant, competent ladies who direct this service.

SIGHT CONSERVATION

With the modern methods of teaching and the latest training aids, blind children can now go to schools together with sighted children and receive the same education that they do.

Some of the training aids used in our school by Mrs. E. G. Reid to help reach the blind children are Braille writers and slates, and a Braille library including encyclopedias as well as Braille text books which have the same information the sighted children are studying.

AUDIO-VISUAL SQUAD

About fifty well trained boys operate the projectors, the record players, and all the other spinning mechanical devices that transport Taft-ites to an art gallery in Rome, the scene of the French Revolution, a Shakespearean Festival at Avon, a scientific expedition at the bottom of the sea. Mr. Feldman is their respected leader.

STAGE SQUAD

The stage squad can be said to have done its best work when nobody is aware of its existence. Then it is that the mike is in order, the lights are right, and the correct number of chairs are conveniently arranged.

The only public appearance the squad makes is its response to Mr. Linville's call, "Will the stage squad please open the curtain!"

Somehow Mr. Cobert finds the time, in the midst of all his other duties, to manage the Stage Squad.

USHERS

Those of us who have been at home in Taft for three years or more have forgotten how confusing it is for a stranger to find his way around and through its miles of corridors.

Fortunately, Mrs. Lindeman remembers, and her squad of ushers, friendly and alert in white shirts and yellow ribbons, has offered to parents and other visitors, Taft's gracious hospitality.

BIO. AND CHEM. SQUADS

They are people who, like the poet, give significance to seemingly unimportant things, like the Bio Squad's etherized frog who becomes for the amateur researcher a source of discovery of the mysteries of life. It will be hard to forget the day when a member of the Chem Squad brought in the infamous apparatus used for the preparation of hydrogen sulfide. Teachers and students are grateful to these squad members for making it possible for the classes to get practical experience in the scientific method. Mrs. Donath and Miss Richards supervise these students.

Taft Sports

We believe that sports are a method for building strong bodies and trimming youthful figures. True as this may be, there are other aspects of sports. They increase our mental capacity by teaching us to concentrate on many things at one time, strengthen our emotional stability by preparing us to accept defeat, and exercise our morality by teaching us to obey the rules.

The fine reputation that our athletic clubs have achieved for themselves is commensurate with the effort they and their leaders have made. It must be remembered that these clubs are designed for pleasure and enjoyment, rather than constant pressuring and tedious competition. They are open to all who are in search of a relaxing way to recreate, in addition to learning athletic skills and aiding teachers invaluablely, all in the light of maintaining physical fitness and good health.

BASKETBALL TEAM

Of particular interest to Taft students are the Prexies, our fine basketball team. Led by our experienced coach, Mr. Stan Breite, the Presidents have edged up to second place in the Bronx division and have earned the title of "spoiler." They have well earned this name because of the extreme competition they have defied from opposing teams from Clinton, Evander Childs and Columbus. Coming Alumni of Taft are sure to learn of Taft's continuing basketball success.

TRACK TEAM

Among Taft's top letter winners are the members of the track team, those people running, scantily clad, through the halls at 3:00 (shorts and tee-shirt) and scaring all our teachers. These boys under the supervision of Mr. Dickerson, although not as glorified as some of our other athletes, hold their own well, running track, jumping obstacles and heaving weights. Special notice should be given to the team's captain, Vernon Johnson, who swept the Best Senior Athlete title.

Starting the season in 3rd place, behind Evander Childs and James Monroe, the team is being pushed toward first by the efforts of Coach B. Schiffer.

Senior members include Captain Richie Jacobs, Steve Abramowitz, Andy Habel, Harold Macon, Richard Slotnick, and Leonard Stecklow.

BOWLING TEAM

SOCCER TEAM

This year's soccer team, under the supervision of Coach Julius Ziffer, has valiantly faced some powerful opponents and has chalked up a record of four wins, three losses, and two ties. Seniors on the team are:

Mrs. Taylor

The grace, agility, and warmhearted chants of the Taft cheerleaders have inspired every Taftite who has attended a game.

The cheerleaders are supervised by Mrs. Vogel.

We thank Mrs. Taylor for her vocal chords with a heart and spirit.

TWIRLERS

Flashes of blue and gold dazzle our eyes. Batons spin upwards, then miraculously find their way into waiting palms. At every game Taft plays, there are our Taft Twirlers, colorfully spurring our team to victory.

BOOSTERS

If spirited yells can help; if the affectionately remembered sight of golden figures leaping in excitement can help; then the Taft Boosters have contributed their share to every Taft victory on the playing field.

Our Taft athletic clubs have been every active as a part of our school activities. Mrs. Vogel, co-ordinator of the Volley Ball Club, has done a fine job in maintaining high standards for the members who have participated in many competitive games and championships. This excellence is readily shown by our winning first place in the Bronx-Wide Volley Ball tournament held at Hunter College recently. Mrs. Dubrow has been enthusiastic in her working with the Bowling Team, organizing many exciting inter-school playdays.

As freshmen, we were assisted by Mrs. Mandelkern in initiating the Tennis Club, which meets after school in the gym. Each spring, warm weather draws the girls outdoors. The club supplied the equipment.

PORTFOLIO

"Look in the mirror, and identify the stranger."

"Look at the picture opposite Room 117, and be inspired to write rhapsodically."

Strange directions? Perhaps. But they have produced some interesting and unusual copy for Portfolio, the pocket size literary and art magazine, which twice a year offers Taft students a showcase for original poems, short stories, essays, and sketches. Even those students who will never write or paint professionally are encouraged by Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Getter, literary and art advisors, to create and express their own ideas for the enlightenment of the school, and the benefit of themselves.

Democracy depends on the dispersion and evaluation of ideas. It is incumbent upon the press to enlighten the public with all the facts and to present the opportunity for their critical appraisal. In keeping with this democratic principle, the prize-winning Taft Review informs our students of events occurring within the school and community. In addition, it stimulates interest in current events and issues, and gives students an opportunity to express their ideas while gaining practical experience in the art of reporting.

The Taft Review recognizes no limit to its sphere of interest. Some of the staff went to the March on Washington last summer, and reported on it in the fall. At the same time, the editors have been careful to include articles about school details such as decorum, studying and cooperation in classes.

Miss Bush, the faculty adviser, is famous for her dynamic direction of the paper.

It is customary, when people have reached a certain point in an Odyssey, to take stock of their progress through space and time by consulting the Ship's Log. We think that just such an occasion is here, so we pause to consider the record.

What has happened to us and to the world in the three years since most of us took the first step in our high school Odyssey?

In the fall of 1961, Taft greeted a new crop of Sophomores, the biggest incoming class of green, wide-eyed gawkers ever. The Twist was the hottest dance around the nation, and Ben Casey's tunic appeared on half the female torsos of the school. The bouffant hairdo reached new heights, and many of us were searching for the notorious fifth floor pool.

During that year (1961-2) we became more aware that the world was struggling with itself, fighting to reach many goals. It was, and still is, trying to patch a Berlin Wall-divided world by sharing knowledge and giving of itself through the Peace Corps. It washed out an old wound, ridding itself of Adolf Eichmann, one-time Nazi SS man. It sent its men into space, to wander among the stars to find out what they have to tell. And during that year its people sought to improve themselves, to live in harmony with each other, to work together, and even to strike to raise their standards of living.

That summer of 1962, the world gaped at the launching of Telstar, the first communications-relay satellite, and was stunned by the suicidal death of Marilyn Monroe, one of Hollywood's most glamorous stars. We asked ourselves some questions about our sense of values.

By the fall of 1962, the largest Soph class became the largest Junior class. The Twist was on the way out; the Bossa Nova came in—along with that cousin to the sack dress, the shift. It was the year that thousands of New York Dodger and Giant fans learned a lesson in humility, rooting exuberantly for the new New York Mets, who were obviously doomed to last place. It was a good year for the school as we welcomed a new Principal, Mr. C. Edwin Linville, who replaced Mrs. Hortense Levisohn.

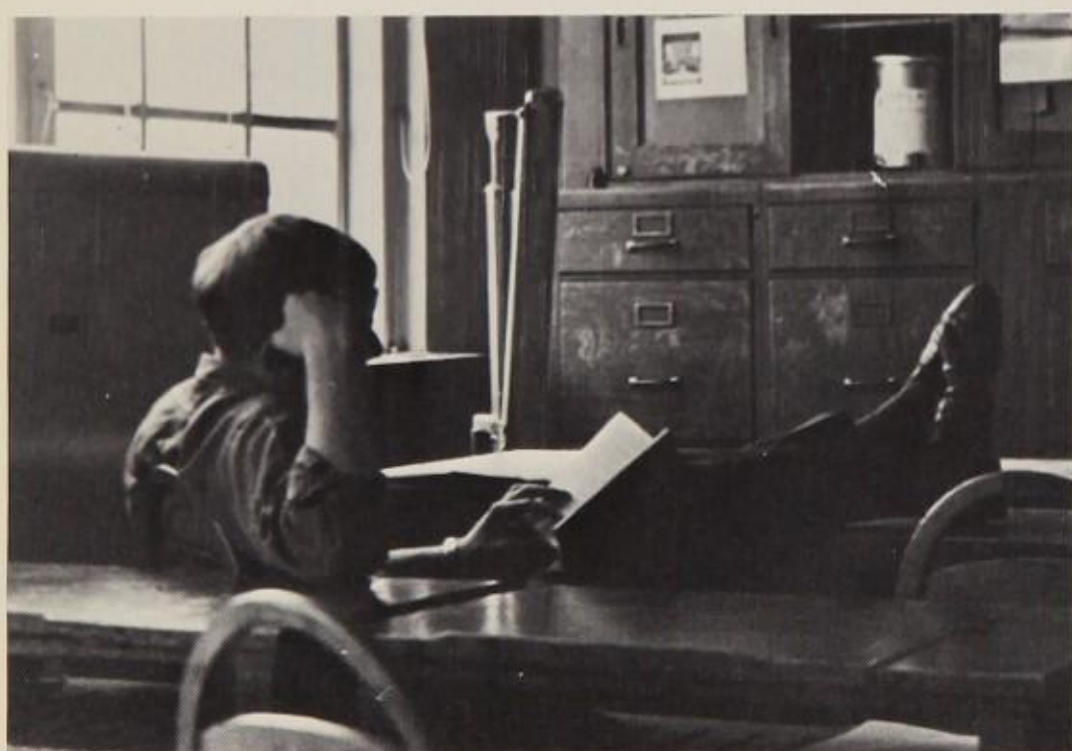

There was much going on in the world that year, 1962-3. We held our breath in October in fear of a nuclear war over the crisis in Cuba. We mourned the death of Eleanor Roosevelt and Robert Frost. But their passing reminded everyone of the richness of a life lived outside itself; of the rewards of giving for the benefit and enjoyment of all. In that year, some people in the United States awakened to a fault in American democracy, hung their heads in shame because of the need for civil rights demonstrations and began setting the scene for a new universal freedom.

Yet, the Senior year, 1963-4, has been the busiest of all. Hairdos fell to shoulder-length flips, knee socks and loafers became popular again, and more boys were wearing mohair sweaters than ever before. Folksinging rose as a national pastime and the Dodgers murdered the Yankees in the World Series by winning four games straight. The Senior Carnival was a sell-out, and brought in more money than in any previous year. But most of all, we looked forward to graduation and the joys and surprises that come with it: caps and gowns, ceremonies and speeches, diplomas and presents, and the Senior Prom.

1963 seemed a dark year for the world. The flaw in U.S. democracy was dramatized again through the civil rights March on Washington. All people mourned the loss of John XXIII, Pope of the Roman Catholic Church, lover of peace, and friend of all humanity. The saddest note of 1963 was the sudden and cruel assassination of our beloved President, John Fitzgerald Kennedy. We remember him in our hearts, and hope that his wisdom, courage and dedication to his country will live on in us as we step out into a new world of adulthood and leadership.

But, in these darkest hours, a ray of hope shines—a small candle in the darkness. With the signing of the Test Ban Treaty the world's people dared feel safer. The Ecumenical Council met in Vatican City to bring brotherhood among men a little closer; a new President purposefully gathered up the unfinished ends left by his fallen predecessor; and a city looked forward to a World's Fair dedicated to the idea of a peaceful world. 1963-4 was a dark year—but also a year of hope.

*"A crowd extols the song which sounds freshest

SENIOR ACTIVITIES

SENIOR CELEBRITIES

For nearly one hundred apprehensive seniors, the hectic week was over at last. Ballots were tabulated, and results announced. The winners were easily recognizable by their starry eyes and flashing smiles. Some of the losers showed red, puffy eyes, but most accepted defeat as just another stumbling block in life. Thus, the annual election of Senior Celebrities was concluded.

We present those who have survived preliminary contests, interviews, mass appraisal, and, finally, actual election.

To the winners, the best of luck—always—and may you never lose those qualities that made you the Senior Celebrities of 1964!

Activities are forces for unity. They are links of friendship. As the senior year closes out the high school career, students feel the need to strengthen associations soon to be broken, and to create memories they can cherish later.

These are some of the reasons so many seniors have participated in all of the senior activities, such as the Carnival, the trips to Bear Mountain, the World's Fair, the Dude Ranch, and Washington, D. C., and the Senior Show.

SENIOR CARNIVAL

On Friday night, October 26, the boys' gym was transformed into a Hallowe'en wonderland of orange and black. The gym was crammed with excited seniors seeking fun and prizes. Highlights of the Carnival included the Wedding Booth, Shave the Balloon Booth and Finky Farm, which won the prize for originality. Many seniors took home prizes such as a stuffed poodle, a Kingston Trio album and tickets to "Mary, Mary!" The money raised, totaling almost $600, was spent in clothing for needy infants.

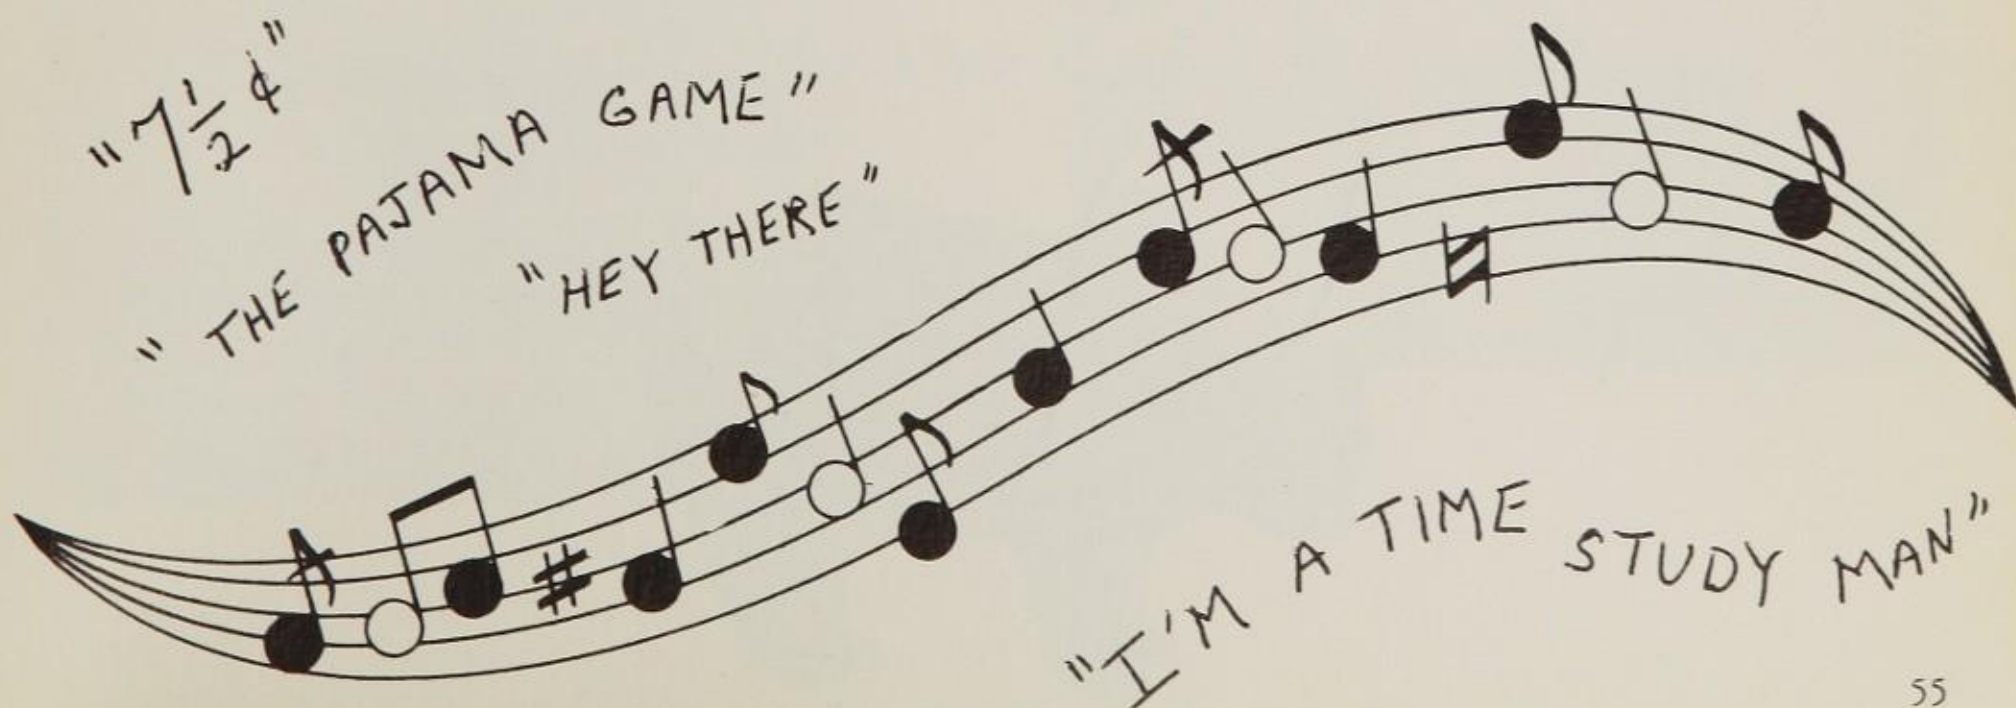

SENIOR SHOW

During the day the auditorium is our study hall, silent except for an occasional rustle of pages or humming of some restless inmates. At 3:00 P.M. it becomes the Taft Musical Theatre buzzing with excitement, color and song. After sitting in the back of the auditorium and listening for a while we begin singing along to the lively songs of "Pajama Game," the Taft Senior Show. In leading roles are Jenny Tabb and Harvey Rodgers and also Barry Malamad, Janet Simon and Leslie Frielich.

It was evident that the senior class thoroughly enjoyed themselves during the school performance. The cast worked like professionals during the night performance for parents and friends.

We thank Mrs. Greenwald and our theater company for giving us one of the highlights of our senior year.

DUDE RANCH

A heavy pall hung over us the week-end we went to the Dude Ranch. We rode; we walked; we talked—quietly; we didn't dance; we thought; we came in out of the rain. The date was November 22-24, 1963.

BEAR MOUNTAIN

The Bear Mountain caper was lively, raucous, crazy; it was fun!

WORLD'S FAIR

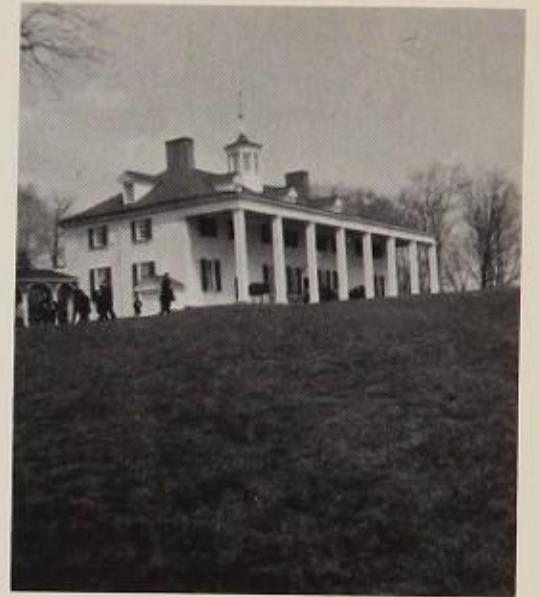

As we remember the highlights of our trip to the World's Fair, a picture of the illuminated Unisphere flashes into our minds. We all realize that now is the time to delve deeper into the true meaning of PEACE THROUGH UNDERSTANDING, the theme of the fair.

The past and the present are vividly portrayed. The gigantic dinosaurs that had looked so gentle on the Hudson River a few months before, seemed so much more ferocious when they towered above us at the fair. As we gazed at the seemingly impossible "Future" exhibits, we wondered what the people of 1939 had thought about television as a daily feature.

At the end of the day, we were tired and foot-sore, but we knew we would never forget the fun we had had at the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON

JENNIE SHAPIRO

Mrs. Jennie Shapiro was a thoughtful and conscientious member of our society. Her major interest was people. In her classes, she made her students' problems her own. She befriended those who had serious disturbances, and many girls remember her cheery, "You'll do better next time," when they had failed a test. This does not mean, however, that she was lax. In her attitude toward her students as students she was demanding. She demanded veracity, good hygiene, responsibility, attention, and effort. In her own work she met the same exacting standards.

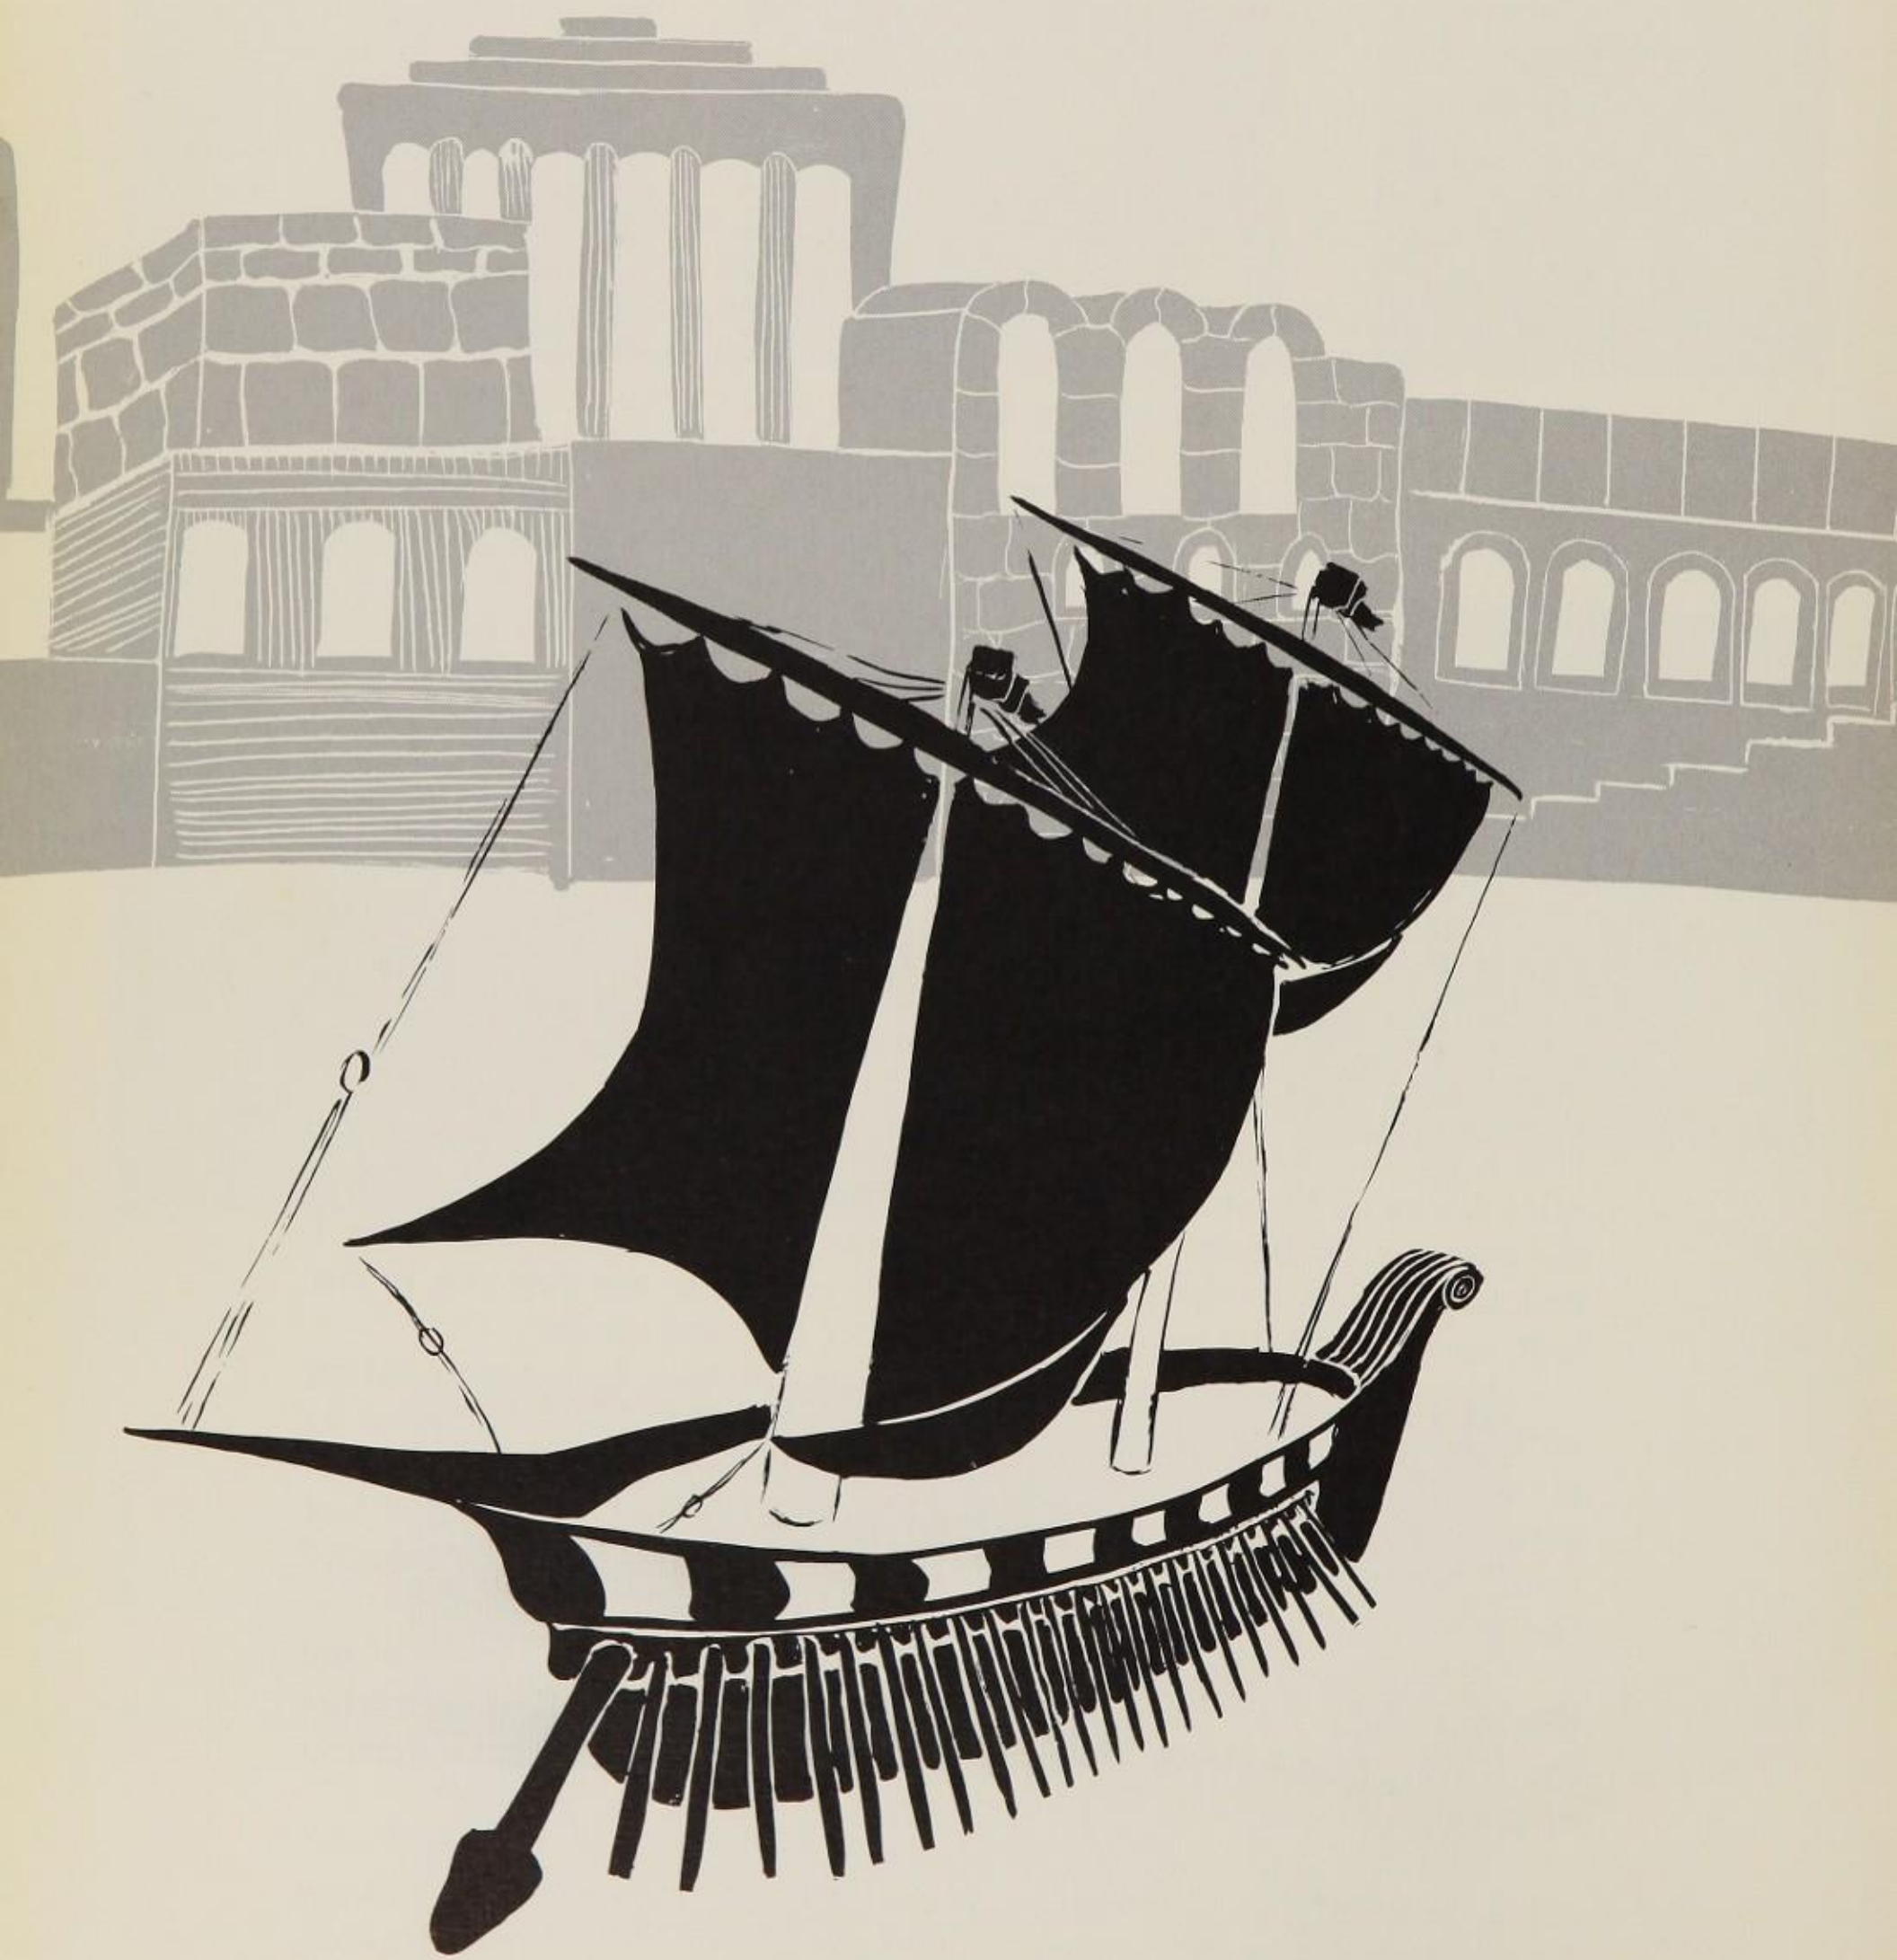

Her genuine concern with humanity and its many cares took practical forms. Having lost a grandchild to Cystic Fibrosis, she characteristically expressed her grief through her efforts to help all sufferers from the disease. In recognition of her tireless work in this cause, the faculty of this school has raised $240 for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation in Mrs. Shapiro's name.

She was, by nature and inclination, "Aunt Jennie," whose warmth made children remember her, after only a telephone conversation. Her friendly manner was always supported by practical schemes for helping people. When she heard that one girl in her official class was desperately in need of money, she arranged for some one to provide a job for the girl, and, it is suspected, supplied the money for the salary. One of her students has said, "I honor her, not so much because she was a good teacher, although she was, but because a year after I had left her class, she still remembered me when she saw me in the hall, and spoke with me about a problem I had had earlier."

Everyone who knew Jennie Shapiro remembers her preoccupation with good health habits. She repeatedly cautioned students and teachers alike to rest more, to eat properly, and to exercise in the fresh air. Somehow, one never thought of her as faddist; she was too relaxed and well-balanced. Similarly, no one would have called her a meddler; she was too gentle and polite in her approach.

How many times would she tell stories of her family's adventures! She made so vivid the account of her daughter's bicycle trip across the United States, that it became a favorite anecdote among a group of people who had never met the lady.

This ability to feel, and to make others feel, the intensely personal flavor of everyday life is the outstanding memory of this sunny human being who, for almost twenty years, gave her warmth, grace, and charm to this school.

Odysseus, Homer's epic hero, was trying to return to his home after the termination of the Trojan Wars; however, uncontrollable powers forced him and his men to sail the vast expanses of the sea, and to face many dangerous adventures before the gods took pity on them, and brought them to their reward and home.

It has occurred to us that for us, coming home can mean the fulfillment of our hopes, and the understanding and acceptance of ourselves.

For 4200 years, Odysseus has worn the traditional mantle of wisdom, and of bravery, and yet The Odyssey is a chronicle of costly mistakes and repeated frustrations. This knowledge tends to make use more tolerant of ourselves, and more willing to risk going forth on our own.

We have been pampered and sheltered most of our lives. Our every move has been directed, our failures minimized, our disappointments cushioned. We shouted our independence while inwardly we craved security and protection. Now, having come thus far, are we willing to accept the difficulties of freedom?

When we tend to look for the easy way and for shortcuts to the fruits of life, we remember that strong winds blew Odysseus's ship to the Land of the Lotus Eaters. Here his men were tempted by a life of ease. They no longer wanted to return to their homes and work, but considered a life of idleness. But they were saved.

At one point Odysseus lost his entire crew when they, starving, disobeyed the grave warnings of the sun-god Hyperion, and slaughtered the Sacred Cows. How many times will we defy long cherished traditions? Will we recognize the difference between the thoughtless destruction of valid tradition and the need to stand up for our belief that change is necessary?

If we are faced with the problem of choosing one course of action or another, and each seems to threaten our security, we will think of Odysseus's dilemma when he faced the choice between Scylla and Charybdis. In one instance he would lose six of his men to a six-headed monster; in another, he would risk the total annihilation of his ship in a whirlpool.

At this "way station of our lives," all we can say is that we have the advantage of understanding and accepting ourselves as fallible but resilient human beings who are sure only of difficulties and the ability to meet them, of mistakes and the wisdom to profit from them.

“Bestow upon me a goodly repute among men.”

“So shall Odysseus come back from his sore wandering.”

Taft then

Taft tomorrow

FAREWELL

Before we leave this haven, Taft, and continue our odyssey to our several ports of call, we are prompted by custom, by sentiment, and affection for our school and each other to say a last word about our feelings as we look back at our past and forward to our future.

We relinquish, regretfully, the happy noisiness of the corridors, the warming presence of people we have loved, the pleasure of having mastered all the rules and customs that made the days run smoothly, the pride in the achievements of our scholars and athletes.

We leave gladly the humble notion that we were not quite adults, the tense cramming for Regents examinations, the confused pain of unexplained failures.

As we think of what is to be, we offer thanks for all the bits and pieces of experience here at Taft, which, we see now, fit into a colorful, complete mosaic. We have been building the solid basis of self assurance to face the future. We are grateful for the guidance which has helped us develop the capacity for our enjoyments as well as for our ambitions, and the understanding of ourselves and others.

We ask for the courage to overcome our paradoxical hesitation to move out of the shelter this school has given us.

The hope that those who follow us will be as happy as we have been as part of Taft High School.
